

James J. Fehr, M.D.

I was a formerly a Clinical Professor of Anesthesiology and Pediatrics at Washington University and cared for children in the cardiac OR and in the pediatric Cardiac ICU. I was also the director of the Saigh Pediatric Simulation Center at St Louis Children's Hospital and Assistant Ombuds at Washington University School of Medicine. In August 2019, I became Anesthesiologist-in-Chief and Director of Pediatric Anesthesiology at Stanford's Lucile Packard Children's Hospital. Clinically, I work in the Cardiac and General ORs as well as in the CVICU. In October 2022 I began a 2-year term as the President of the Society for Pediatric Anesthesia.